

DISCOURSE & SOCIETY

EDITOR Teun A. van Dijk
University Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona, Spain

CO-EDITORS
Michael Billig, Loughborough University, UK
Teresa Carbo, CIETSAS, Mexico City, Tlalpan, Mexico
Ruth Wodak, University of Lancaster, UK

HONORARY BOARD
Noam Chomsky, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, USA
Aaron Cicourel, University of California, San Diego, USA
Doris Graber, University of Illinois, Chicago, USA
Michael Halliday, Kilara, New South Wales, Australia
Cheris Kramarac, University of Oregon, Eugene, USA
Tove Skutnabb-Kangas, Roskilde University, Denmark

BOOK REVIEW EDITOR
Alon Lischinsky, Oxford Brookes University, UK

ADVISORY BOARD
Ahmed Abdel-Raheem, University of Lodz, Poland
Martha Augoustinos, University of Adelaide, Australia
Paul Baker, Lancaster University, UK
Jan Blommaert, Institute of Education, University of London, UK
Adriana Bolivar, Central University of Venezuela, Caracas, Venezuela
Charles Briggs, University of California, Berkeley, USA
Carmen Rosa Caldas-Coulthard, Federal University of Santa Catarina, Brazil; University of Birmingham, UK
Deborah Cameron, Oxford University, UK
Isolda Carranza, National University of Córdoba, Argentina
Paul Chilton, University of Lancaster, UK
Lilie Chouliaraki, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark
John Downing, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, USA

Alessandro Duranti, University of California, Los Angeles, USA
Susan Ehrlich, York University, Ontario, Canada
Norman Fairclough, University of Lancaster, UK
Sonja K. Foss, University of Colorado, Denver, USA
Phil Graham, University of Queensland, Australia
Reiko Hayashi, Konan Women's University, Kobe, Japan
Monica Heller, OISE, University of Toronto, Canada
John Heritage, University of California, Los Angeles, USA
Janet Holmes, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand
Sachiko Ide, Japanese Women's University, Tokyo, Japan
Siegfried Jäger, DISS, Duisberg, Germany
Adam Jaworski, University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong
Celia Kitzinger, University of York, UK
Helga Kotthoff, University of Education, Freiburg, Germany
Gunther Kress, Institute of Education, University of London, UK
Robin Lakoff, University of California, Berkeley, USA
Michelle Lazar, National University of Singapore, Singapore
Theo van Leeuwen, University of Technology, Sydney, Australia
Martin Montgomery, University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, UK
Dennis Mumby, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA
Sik Hung Ng, Renmin University of China, China
Laura Pardo, University of Buenos Aires, Argentina
Anssi Peräkylä, University of Helsinki, Finland
Jonathan Potter, Loughborough University, UK
John Richardson, Loughborough University, UK

Luisa Martín Rojo, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain
Christina Schäffner, Aston University, Birmingham, UK
Shi-xu, Hangzhou Normal University, PR China
Geneva Smitherman, Michigan State University, East Lansing, USA
Candace West, University of California, Santa Cruz, USA
Uli Windisch, University of Geneva, Switzerland
Saida Yahya-Othman, University of Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania
Kwesi Yankah, University of Ghana, Legon, Ghana

Discourse & Society (ISSN 0957-9265, print; ISSN 1460-3624, online) is published in six issues, January, March, May, July, September and November by SAGE Publications (Los Angeles, London, New Delhi, Singapore, Washington DC and Melbourne).

Annual subscription (2019, 6 issues)
Combined institutional rate (print and electronic) £1,210/US$2,240; from 2009 an institutional subscription to Discourse and Society will include 6 issues of Discourse and Communication.
Electronic only and print only subscriptions are available for institutions at a discounted rate. Note VAT may be applicable at the appropriate local rate. Visit www.sagepublishing.com for more details.
To access your electronic subscription (institutional only) simply visit online.sagepub.com and activate your subscription. Abstracts, table of contents and contents alerts are available on this site free of charge for all.

Student discounts, single issue rates and advertising details are available from SAGE Publications Ltd, 1 Oliver's Yard, 55 City Road, London EC1Y 1SP, UK. Tel: +44 (0)20 7324 8500 [email: subscriptions@sagepub.co.uk; website: www.sagepublishing.com]; and in North America from SAGE Publications Inc, 2455 Teller Road, Thousand Oaks, CA 91359, USA. Copyright © 2019 SAGE Publications Ltd.

Apart from fair dealing for the purposes of research or private study, or criticism or review, and only as permitted under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act, 1988, this publication may only be reproduced, stored or transmitted, in any form or by any means, with the prior permission in writing of the Publishers, or in the case of reprographic reproduction, in accordance with the terms of licences issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency. Inquiries concerning reproduction outside those terms should be sent to the publishers at the above-mentioned address.

Printed by Henry Ling Ltd, Dorchester, UK.

Information for contributors can be found on the inside back cover.
Send books for review to Ingrid Piller, Department of Linguistics, Faculty of Human Sciences, Macquarie University, NSW 2109, Australia.
[email: ingrid.piller@gmail.com]

Contents

Articles

- When citizens talk: Stance and representation in online discourse on Biafra agitations 117
Esther Ajiboye and Taiwo Abioye
- 'Hitlahamut': A term for unreasonable populist public talk in Israel 135
Gonen Dori-Hacohen
- Pledging to harm: A linguistic appraisal analysis of judgment comparing realized and non-realized violent fantasies 154
Marlon Hurt and Tim Grant
- 'Alternative facts are not facts': Gaffe-announcements, the Trump administration and the media 172
Chris McVittie and Andy McKinlay
- Speaking on behalf of oneself and others: Negotiating speaker identities in journalistic discourse on refugee activism in Sweden 188
Gustav Persson

Book reviews

- Shi-Xu, Kwesi Kwaa Prah and María Laura Pardo, Discourses of the Developing World: Researching Properties, Problems and Potentials 205
Reviewed by Mariana Pascual
- Catalina Fuentes-Rodríguez and Gloria Álvarez-Benito (eds), A Gender-based Approach to Parliamentary Discourse: The Andalusian Parliament 207
Reviewed by Jun Pan
- Paul McIlvenny, Julia Zhukova Klausen and Laura Bang Lindegaard, Studies of discourse and governmentality: New perspectives and methods 209
Reviewed by Luke Alexander

Mariana Achugar, Discursive Processes of Intergenerational Transmission of Recent History: (Re)Making Our Past Reviewed by Mahé Ben Hamed	211
Vijay K Bhatia, Critical Genre Analysis: Investigating Interdiscursive Performance in Professional Practice Reviewed by Jixian Pang	213
Giuseppe Balirano, Gardaí and Badfellas, The Discursive Construction of Organized Crime in the Irish Media Reviewed by Antonio Fruttaldo	215

Visit journals.sagepub.com/home/das

Free access to tables of contents and abstracts. Site-wide access to the full text for members of subscribing institutions findings and insights. These research findings are not only useful to illustrate and support the theoretical framework discussed in earlier chapters, but also exemplary to novice researchers in the field.

Overall, this book is very solid, cogently argued and highly structured, written in an accessible manner. It is also inspirational, representing a much-to-be-welcomed addition to a rapidly expanding body of literature in the vibrant field of genre studies, and it should serve as an excellent reference for students, teachers and researchers in the areas of ESP, professional communication studies and applied linguistics in general.

Giuseppe Balirano, Gardaí and Badfellas, The Discursive Construction of Organized Crime in the Irish Media, Napoli: Editoriale Scientifica, 2017; 222 pp. €13.00 (pbk).

Reviewed by: Antonio Fruttaldo, Department of Human and Social Sciences, University of Naples 'L'Orientale', Italy

While criminal organisations have been mainly studied in the field of jurisprudence, highlighting the legal aspects of this phenomenon, relatively few studies have been devoted to the discursive construction of crime syndicates. In this book, Giuseppe Balirano fills this gap with an exploration of the ideological construal of the Irish organised crime syndicate in Irish media discourse(s). Media have always represented a window on the world, a filter that allows people to make sense of reality. This sense-making quality, however, entails specific construals of how events and actors must be interpreted, judged or understood. On the basis of this assumption, the focus of this book is on critically unfolding the ideological motivations behind particular representations of Irish criminal organisations. Combining a variety of methodologies and approaches, Balirano studies how the principal actors involved in criminal activities in the Republic of Ireland are constructed in different media genres.

The book opens with a foreword by Luigi Maria Sicca, the book series editor, explaining how the book was conceived and developed in the fertile and international context of the puntOorg international network. Balirano's Introduction sets the tone for the following five chapters. In particular, it aims to enable 'non-expert readers to familiarise with the specialised discourse of organised crime' (p. 8). The definitions of organised crime used by United Nations and the Council of Europe are critically explored, combining these with theories of leading criminologist historians of organised crime. This allows the author to reconstruct the institutionalisation of Irish crime syndicates, achieved also through tracing the historical evolution of organised crime in Ireland, so as to let readers better understand how the phenomenon slowly became a media and social concern.

Chapter 1 introduces an Irish perspective to the notion of the 'crime syndicate', providing 'an overview of the historical, social and legal backdrop against which organised crime and the subsequently mediatised moral panic thrived in the Republic of Ireland from the Seventies to the present day' (p. 19). The chapter also introduces the deep-rooted mediatised association between minor criminal activities, politics, terrorism and the birth of organised crime in Ireland, whose flourishing is linked with their relationship with the Irish Republican Army (IRA). The specific focus of the chapter is on the process whereby the phenomenon of moral panic related to the media coverage of Irish criminal activities discursively constructs and reproduces the idea of terrorism and organised crime as ‘contributing to the weakening of state security and social and economic growth’ (p. 27).

Chapter 2 deals with the hybrid methodological approach adopted by the author for the analysis of the language of Irish media discourses. While traditionally the adoption of a qualitative approach seems to exclude a quantitative one, the methodology adopted by the author combines a quantitative corpus-based discourse perspective with more qualitative, analytical tools taken from Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) and its Discourse-Historical Approach. In addition, since the corpus also includes multimodal texts, the analysis of these sources is tackled from a Multimodal Critical Discourse perspective as well.

Chapter 3 describes the collection and characteristics of the MOBcorpus under investigation, which comprises two subcorpora. MOB1 contains textual data (ca. 2,000 articles) from two major Irish quality newspapers, The Irish Times and the Irish Independent. MOB2, on the other hand, is a multimodal corpus and includes words and images from three Irish filmic productions linked to crime organisations: the films When the Sky Falls (2000) and Veronica Guerin (2003), and the Irish TV drama series Love/Hate (2010–2014).

The analysis of MOB1 is carried out in Chapter 4, which deals with the linguistic construction in news discourse of the Irish police force (i.e. gardai), the criminals (i.e. badfellas) and the victims as the principal ‘social actors’ involved in criminal activities. The author highlights how the representation offered by the media primes readers to an understanding of the events unfolding in the specific historical context captured by the data under investigation, entailing a ‘perpetuation of those Irish narratives [...] resulting in a form of historical continuum, an expanded timeline connecting Ireland’s past to her present forms of headline criminality’ (p. 135). The corpus-based approach highlights how the frequent occurrence of tokens such as ‘gangs’ and ‘gangland’ with reference to organised crime, connected to words such as ‘imitation’ and ‘collaboration’ with reference to political terrorism, generates a ‘buzz effect’ and a ‘linear conceptualisation of a crime-terror spectrum suggesting that diachronically such a convergence is still felt to be strong in Ireland’ (p. 136).

Chapter 5 presents the results of the analysis of MOB2, focusing on the multimodal representation of badfellas as social actors, with a particular emphasis on the interpersonal role of the gaze of represented criminals. The analysis introduces an interesting concept, that of Multimodal Prosody. This approach suggests that viewers are primed to associate specific actors with specific relationships and feelings that the image producers intend viewers to establish through continuous exposure to regular patterns of multimodal representation. In the case of MOB2, the analysis demonstrates how the pattern of directly addressing viewers in the Irish filmic productions under investigation establishes a multimodal prosody according to which the interactive participants are transformed into prey at the mercy of the criminal gaze.

Balirano’s book not only fills a gap in the literature on the discursive representation of organized crime, but also opens a debate on the integration of different methodologies in the approach of media products that make use of various semiotic systems in the representation of social actors. In this way, the contribution seems to tackle the ongoing debate on the epistemological status of contemporary research, which sees qualitative and quantitative methodologies as an ‘either/or’ rather than a ‘both/and’.